

Toward A Better Understanding of Epicurean Justice And Injustice (With Examples of "Just" and "Unjust")

I can't shake the idea that it has to be possible to determine if an action or law is just or not. Why else would Epicurus devote so many of the Principal Doctrines to justice?

I intellectually understand no divine or absolute source for morality, and life is contextual. But Epicurus's prolepsis of justice has to have some practical application.

What is it but to help us choose how to act justly which goes hand in hand with living pleurably?
