

Toward A Better Understanding of Epicurean Justice And Injustice (With Examples of "Just" and "Unjust")

Post by "Don" of March 25, 2021 at 12:50 PM

Quote from Cassius

Quote from Don

If you're weighing the choice of whether or not you're going to commit an act contrary to the laws of the community in which you live, you're free to do that. BUT be aware that if you're not caught right away, that doesn't mean your home free... Until the day you die. You want to live your life that way?

I think you're correct. Of course the big picture includes the possibility of revolting (Cassius Longinus model) or leaving (which Epicurus did from Mytilene and Lampsacus, right?)

That even makes sense in the context of the KDs here: if you feel you can't abide by the contract of your community, you have the choice to oppose it (Does the pain of that makes it choice-worthy?) or find a new community and a new contract