

Autarkia And Epicurean Living In The Modern World

Post by “Macario” of September 7, 2021 at 11:02 PM

Quote from Philia

And I also can see that it could be wonderful to re-create a modern Garden (or Gardens)...even a movement which would bring friendship and savoring life as the most important things, and work to overcome alienation, isolation, and consumerist over-consumption. And it would also be a place to examine and discuss the question of what makes a worthwhile enjoyable life.

I often find myself thinking about that, and it makes me wonder if anyone here has ever heard or know of the existence of such places nowadays anywhere in the world? I believe it would work on some Ecovillage self-sustainable model. It would be indeed an amazing place to visit, volunteer or even live for a while. Where we could study and exercise the philosophy in a theoretical and practical way.

By the way, welcome Philia! I am also new to the forum and found it a tremendously useful resource.