

FORUM USAGE: TIPS AND TOOLS

Post by “Kalosyni” of January 4, 2022 at 9:22 PM

Hi Everyone, This thread gathers together some usage tips, which may be a helpful guide for new users. Let us know if you have any questions, or any suggestions on things which aren't covered here, thank you 😊

FORUM USAGE: TIPS AND TOOLS

To change the forum theme from default to an "easier on the eyes" version: scroll to the bottom of any page, select "Change Style," and then simply click on one of the available options. Some themes can be changed to "dark mode" within the user control panel.

Bookmarks: This is now located in your user control panel. You can bookmark posts and other pages, and they will show up both on your Bookmark page and on the Bookmark section of the sidebar of many pages, near the top right.

Using the Forum Search feature: It is best to select the main forum page to search within the entire forum, otherwise your search will be limited to whatever sub-level you are currently in. A few of our members have noted that they get better search results by using Google search engine and typing in EpicureanFriends.com together with the searched for topic.

Posting Etiquette:

--New Registrants (Level 01) can post their questions in their welcome thread.

--Questions are great and there is no such thing as a "bad" question. Everybody wins - new users can gain new understanding and seasoned users gain through the exercise of giving answers.

--If a similar question was answered in the past, then your question might be answered with a link to the previously posted information. You may want to do a quick search using the "Search feature" or Google (as described above) before asking your question. You can also check here: FAQs.

--If you are not posting a direct question but instead posting a statement to ask if your viewpoint resonates with the forum, then please be sure that your statement directly refers to Epicurean philosophy, Epicurean people, or this Epicurean forum AND make sure it adheres to the "Not Neo-Epicurean but Epicurean" posting policies. Any posts containing "partisan politics", advocating "supernatural religion", or "absolute virtue" will be subjected to consideration for removal.

--When quoting from a source make sure to place that text inside a quote bubble -- simply click the quote tool icon to bring up a quote box (located in the tool bar). This helps to give proper credit to sources and makes it easier to read.

--You can refer to what a forum member said or material contained within a previous post by highlighting that passage with your mouse and then clicking on "insert quote" which pops up as you highlight a sentence.

--You can address your post to a specific postee by typing an "@" symbol in front of the forum member's name (and this will result in a blue highlight). This can be useful when you want to create clarity in responding to others, and it will trigger a notification in their notification system (and by email for infrequent users).

"About Me" section of your profile: You might like to add some info into to your profile page's "About me" section on your hobbies, interests, reading goals, or any reading you have completed. This can only be viewed by registered members.

Follow people: Click on a person's profile and then click on the "person icon" on their profile page. When you click on the "Latest Posts" you will then see an option to click on for sorting incoming new threads according to "Filter by followed users".
