

Is reality real? (from Big Think)

Very true, it's definitely a fine line here between awe for the magnitude and behavior of the knowable/perceptible universe and fear of some mysteriously inaccessible reality that we can't perceive...but only certain academics (a new priesthood) can. I don't want this to be perceived as anti-science, but there is a "lane" that scientist need to stay in and not attempt to use scientific speculation (like multiverses and bubble universes) to lead people with sensationalism into thinking that the mysteries are incalculable and that we as ordinary people can't know what truth is.
