

Tetrapharmakos in Philodemus's On Choices and Rejections

Debates like this are good because they bring out things to think about even when we can't reach final agreement.

Unfortunately the version I am citing is all over the Internet - it's the Epicurus reader version: <https://en.m.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tetrapharmakos>.

But when I want someone to defend it I know where to go! 😊 I hope one day Don's version will be the accepted one, but I like my summaries to be accurate, and I don't find these to be accurate enough to be relied on - so I stick to the full versions which stand alone.

But again - having added this as if a footnote - we can proceed having our positions more clear than before. No one who reads Don's interpretation is going to have any problem.
