

Rarely read writer DeCasseres on Epicurus' great discovery

Post by "Cassius" of February 27, 2022 at 8:53 AM

Quote from EricR

I really enjoy poetic writing like that. How can you resist a line like "the winter of grim Stoicism"?

I can't. It is outstanding and appropriate!

Eric first it's good to see you post again. You have many recent "soul-mates" I would predict in both Scott and Kalosyni.

Also -- I will look to see if that material from De Casseres is on Archive.org or other place where we can link to more of the text. If you know of a place please go ahead and add it here too. I gather that he was at least somewhat sympathetic to Nietzsche and there are bound to be more parallels to follow.