

Metaphorically Picturing Epicurean Philosophy

If I were doing this, some of the things I'd try to show:

- Outside the cave is just what it looks like, not any kind of allegory. Just the real world.
- The cave is labelled Plato's Cave, maybe even with Plato somewhere directing operations
- Ideas for images projected on the wall:
 - supernatural religion
 - Providence
 - Fate
 - fear of death
 - fear of divine punishment
 - fear of almost anything, really
 - following orders or going along with everyone else vs pursuing what gives you pleasure

But I'm not an artist, so take this as just throwing out ideas.
