

Jupyter Notebook (Used in Lucretius Comparison_

Post by “TauPhi” of May 17, 2023 at 7:28 PM

I haven't used Git much but based on my limited knowledge of it I think it can be a great tool for collaboration. As far as Jupyter is concerned, it wouldn't be my first choice. Not that I have anything against it (I don't know it at all) but I think markdown would be far better to work with for these reasons:

- simplicity - markdown is basically plain text so it's super easy to work with and integration with Git version control would be easier as well
- versatility - markdown files can be edited on any platform using any editor so collaborators are not tied down to one, single option

Regarding Git server, I'd choose something like GitLab over GitHub. This is solely based on my aversion to software corporations (and GitHub belongs to Microsoft as far as I'm aware). I'm sure GitHub is fine but I wouldn't be myself if I didn't try to convince people to use alternatives.