

Presenting the Principal Doctrines in Narrative Form

Post by “Don” of June 22, 2023 at 6:07 PM

Quote from Cassius

So to avoid drawing any improper conclusions from the "absence" of divisions, it would be necessary to know of some ancient texts where divisions were used. If everything in ancient Latin and Greek was in fact run together without much break then not much can be inferred.

Personally, I think the fact that there were lists of 44 and 40 PDs floating around shows there was no "standard" list. I'm also curious to look at the Latin translations to see if they offered any gaps in the text for topics or paragraphs.