

A Pleasant Life instead of Pleasure

Okay, Don, taking up the challenge...

A "pleasure-filled life" sounds better than a "pleasurable life".

"Life of well-being" = this is like a bird's eye view, and it is a long time extending all the way to the end of one's life.

"Well-being" - this could be pointing at specific goods.

"Life of pleasure" - more active, and enjoyment of experiences.

"Life of well-being" - more restful, with a focus on a healthy body but with more emphasis on the health of the mind.

"A blessed life" - fate or God was, or is, smiling upon you.

A "joyous life" sounds better than a "happy life", in that there are probably more fun gatherings of friends and family happening in the joyous life.

(just my own subjective ideas 😊)
