"and, besides, love of humanity prompts us to aid also the foreigners who come here."

We presuppose, of course, that when Diogenes of Oinoanda wrote that he did not know where the stones of his wall will be gone and lost, and how they will be found again.

Yes, that is true, Diogenes of Oinoanda did a good job, but in now days he would probably say : in the basis of my love of humanity, I gave a fortune of money to build this huge wall with stones that were beneficial to the locals or to the foreigners who came, just for the purpose to build their homes or to build sheepfold for placing inside them their sheep and goats. Humans and sheep and goats all united as one for living inside homes and sheepfolds ...chewing the "grass of ignorance and nonsense" without examine and the issue that there is also a butcher that one day will visit them all. 🤔
