

ACT - a bridge which translates Epicurean philosophy into life goals (thread started by Julia)

Post by "Kalosyni" of September 9, 2024 at 7:16 AM

Quote from Julia

"Happiness for a dog or a cat is straightforward. If pets are given shelter, food and drink, warmth, stimulation, play, and physical health they are contented. [...] But many humans have all the things a nonverbal organism would need to be happy, and yet they are not. [...] Literally nothing external that you can name [...] [is] enough to ensure that a human will not suffer terribly. [...] [And despite all evidence to the contrary, in mental health] there is the assumption of healthy normality."

This reminds me of the leaky pot analogy from Lucretius.

Thread

The Vessel Analogy At The Opening of Lucretius Book Six

I'd like to ask for input on this question about the opening of book six of Lucretius involving the "vessel" analogy. The text is below, but here's the question:

It appears that Lucretius is separating out two aspects of the defects in the "jar" - (1) the jar is leaking and cannot be filled due to leaks caused by the holes, and (2) that the jar tainted all that it took in as with a foul odor.

As to (1) It seems to me that the leaks can be pretty well identified with the analogy of the Danaides,...

Cassius

September 13, 2023 at 7:06 PM