

Looking for a book recommendation

Joshua and Cassius both recommended "A Few Days in Athens" by Frances Wright, so I wanted to record that I did obtain a copy of it (from Project Gutenberg) and read it; I enjoyed it. Thanks to you both for the recommendation.

I lately decided that I would spend a bit of time each day reading about Epicureanism, or a book that supports my study of Epicureanism. I am currently reading "Knowledge, Reality, and Value: A Mostly Common Sense Guide to Philosophy" by Michael Huemer, because I wanted to read a primer on philosophy, thinking that such a background might aid my Epicurean studies. I tentatively plan to then re-read Emily Austin's book again, then read "The Cambridge Companion of Epicureanism" (2009), which is included in the "Suggestions for Further Reading" section of Professor Austin's book.
