

What Would Epicurus Say To Someone Who Complains "The World Is Unjust / Life Isn't Fair"?

Post by "Root304" of October 27, 2024 at 4:17 PM

My thoughts are that if you do not know the nature of Justice, the nature and History of the State and you do not know the methods of effective activism and are unwilling to attempt them; then railing about injustice is a sign for the need to integrate truths about reality via knowledge or therapeutic means. A seasoned activist is more precise and calculating and those who don't care or don't want to try are generally silent. The loudest voices for your own cause are usually the least effective and most likely to be waving a false flag.