Thank you for the warm welcome.

Given that this is one of the more active places where Epicurean philosophy is discussed, it usually pops up whenever I look up anything about Epicurus.

The reason I signed up was that it was required in order to download files here, and I wanted to download a PDF of Epicurus' collected works that had been posted here.

I haven't read much yet, which I plan to fix soon in the next few months when I will have more spare time to read, but I got interested as I didn't think such a philosophy focused on the rejection of the supernatural and the pursuit of pleasure (in its proper form and understanding) existed. Subsequently, it piqued my interest as someone who had left Christianity not long ago and is looking to deconstruct from the supernatural and superstition.

Cheers everyone.
