

Epicurus and the Art of Land Surveying

Post by “Joshua” of January 24, 2020 at 8:22 AM

Quote

Great to hear from you - post whenever you can. So you've move from truck-driving to surveying? Quite a move there must be a story behind how you picked surveying!

Actually, Cassius, I sort of just fell into it through a family connection. But land surveying was Henry David Thoreau's profession for most of his life—and in fact a handful of his surveys, including the survey of Walden Pond, are still on file at the records office in Concord, Massachusetts. And that pleases me immensely. I love being outside, and the work isn't bad.

JS454F0.jpg or type unknown

R71vyCY.jpg or type unknown