

"Uninspiring Responses of the Day" Thread

Post by "Cassius" of June 1, 2020 at 9:57 AM

I still post on other forums as a means of identifying new people who might be interested in the more rigorous approach to Epicurus that ought to be a goal of us here. The results are not always what I like, but can be amusing, and maybe point to areas of continuing interest where we can produce new material.

Here's my nomination for uninspiring response of the day (name deleted):

Cassius Amicus Thanks for the comments so far. Also it would be interesting to know "how do you use your philosophy?" Comparing it to common religion, is it something you think about on Sundays and forget for the rest of the week? How do you incorporate it into yo...
See More

Like · Reply · 1h

[Name Deleted]: I try not to take life too seriously. I'm not sure its real anyway. I've always felt that we have a lot to learn from the Ancients, but my education is based in science, not the humanities, so I will at best have an undergraduate understanding of philosophy.

Like · Reply · 1h