

General Identification of the Argument in "On Methods of Inference"

Post by "Don" of October 29, 2020 at 3:28 AM

Just came across this and didn't know if it would be helpful. Posting here for reference:

<https://orb.binghamton.edu/sagp/157/>

I'll claim ignorance here, but was Aristotle also one who amassed evidence before attempting to come to any conclusion? I see articles claiming Aristotle as originator of the/a "scientific method." Or is that because Aristotle was more palatable to the Christians and was allowed to have his writings survive?