How 'god-like' cats are the pet of choice for atheists: Non-believers try to win affection and approval from felines in same way as churchgoers, study finds

- People attending church more than once a week owned 1.4 cats, study shows
- Meanwhile those who have never attended have two cats on average
- Oklahoma University asked over 2,000 people to find cat people characteristics
- A professor said the pets are 'very godlike' and a substitute for the non-religious
