

Happy Birthday General Thread

Post by “Cassius” of February 10, 2022 at 9:21 AM

This thread will contain system-generated Happy Birthday messages.

I think it probably makes sense to encourage users to use their Timelines to post just a little info about themselves, so rather than set up separate threads for each user, or post those greetings in this thread, let's allow the system to notify us of new birthdays in this thread, and then place greetings on the user timeline.

HBD to you, Jasper Sky !

You're at such a great place to learn and share about Epicureanism. Please feel free to post any ideas and questions you have. From your "About Me" profile section, it seems you would likely have LOTS you could share.

Glad to have you here!

Yes a special happy birthday to @EricR. Eric has had an account here since 2016 and has been a good friend during that time, It's interesting how patterns tend to repeat, and I don't think Eric would mind my saying that he has always struck me as someone very similar to our Joshua -- similar "radio" voice, background in Buddhism, poetry, and very creative.

Post by “EricR” of January 25, 2023 at 8:40 AM

Thank you so much for the BD greetings. Very kind of you especially considering my...umm...lack of participation here! 😊

I also heard from another online friend who I hadn't connected with for quite some time. I've actually been somewhat out of the online picture generally for the past 2 years. I've just finally uploaded some music videos to an otherwise dormant youtube channel. There are only 2 pieces there, uploaded last week. More are coming.

Image not found or type unknown

EricR

Welcome to my youtube channel. I offer original music and videos that I hope offer a momentary respite from the challenges of daily life. We are more than...

www.youtube.com

I'm also updating my old mindmuser.com website and am starting to post there. I'm really not sure what I'm going to do there, but it seems that I am drawn to offer some information I've picked up over my 67 years.

As I've said to Cassius privately in the past, I find the kindness in this group quite alluring since I am a terrible Epicurean 😊 .

I've pretty much tossed all philosophies out in favour of sorting out my own approach to life. That does not mean I don't consider various ideas, but some people are very attached to theirs. So you can imagine the kind of reaction I can expect from being so independent and declaring the value of a free mind.

Anyway, thank you so much for thinking of me.

By Zeus! Happy Birthday, Cassius!! So, should we have "a customary celebration on the first day of the month of October" to celebrate the founder of our little online community here from now on? How have I missed that date in the past! A joyous birthday to you!

Because of your nice note I am going to tell you something I have not shared previously, but I am going to say now "publicly" and change for the record. When I set up this forum and my profile it seemed like a good idea to obfuscate my date of birth for privacy reasons. That is now going to change and this is why: (1) At this point in time the NSA and most of the rest of the world knows everything about everyone so little is served by fudging. (2) Further, I was watching a documentary the other day that reminded me of a fact that I had long forgotten: Apparently it is recorded that during the battle of Philippi my "namesake" Cassius Longinus stated that his birthday was October 3. Well in truth, and by total coincidence against odds of 365 to 1, my own birthday is in fact October 3. So I might as well let it be known that the real significance of October 3 as a day worthy of remembrance is that it is the birthday of the man who stood up to Cicero, defended Epicurus to his face, and caused Cicero to express public doubt and admit that he might have underestimated the philosophy of Epicurus. Now that is a man whose birthdate is worth celebrating. It will no doubt confuse the "birthday bot" here in the forum software, but I am correcting my birthday to its actual date, October 3rd, and telling this little factoid to make it more memorable in honor of the real Cassius. Cassius may have taken or been given the nickname of "liberator," but his real distinction was what he accomplished for Epicurus.

"For I hope that men generally will come to understand how much all the world hates cruelty, and how much it loves integrity and clemency, and that the blessings most eagerly sought and coveted by the bad ultimately find their way to the good. For it is hard to convince men that "the good is to be chosen for its own sake"; but that pleasure and tranquillity of mind is acquired by virtue, justice, and the good is both true and demonstrable. Why, Epicurus himself, from whom all the Catiuses and Amafiniuses  in the world, incompetent translators of terms as they are, derive their origin, lays it down that "to live a life of pleasure is impossible without living a life of virtue and justice".

 Don · An hour ago

Well played! And a fascinating historical alignment. Hey, maybe years from now there will be as much controversy on the birth date of the Cassiuses as there is on Epicurus!
