Wiki Development

Welcome to the Wiki, which in the past was known as the "Lexicon" feature. We're doing a massive overhaul of it here on the forum, but under the hood the technology of the Lexicon has not changed - it's just been given the more familiar name "Wiki." In the future this wiki will do at least three major things for us:

1. It provides a Wiki feature whereby we can create entries for words and display their definitions in our Epicurean context. By use of this feature whenever you type a Principle Doctrine or a Vatican Saying number anywhere on the site (for example PD01, PD21, VS01, VS53) you'll see that those turn into hyperlinks through which you can read about them further.
2. It provides a "Wiki" feature whereby we can set up pages such as http://www.epicureanfriends.com/wcf/lexicon/in…ns-in-canonics/ at which we can have a mini - wiki within the site (rather than outside) to which we can refer regularly.
3. It provides a "Collaboration" feature through which we can set up special purpose pages, such as this one, http://www.epicureanfriends.com/wcf/lexicon/in…nds-to-do-list/ , where we can designate a special user group or number of users to collaborate and prepare unique documents. Find a list of the documents we are currently collaborating on here: http://www.epicureanfriends.com/wcf/lexicon/in…tion-documents/

Below is a Table of Categories for Entries in the Wiki. Note that all articles are not listed in this table, at the rest can be found by clicking the link to the first letter of the article name.
