I think as far as we Epicureans go, it depends on how far we want to defend the position of an eternal universe. Getting into modern physics and other philosophical arguments beyond the more simple assertions.

I think there is ample observable and logical evidence that the universe is eternal. It may go through "changes" but those changes really make no difference to me as an Epicurean.

It's easy enough to say it's eternal and move on with my day seeking out pleasure.
