

Toward a New Interlinear Gloss of De Rerum Natura

Post by "Cassius" of June 3, 2021 at 7:17 AM

Would we be doing too much of a stretch to infer that calling it the noblest of the books implies that it was in a form similar to the other "books"? Once you get past the initial greeting in the letters, it doesn't read that much differently in my mind from the letters, especially in the way the final doctrines are directed at organizing one's life for the best result, and not lamenting the passing of friends.