That looks an excellent resource. Thank you for bringing it to my attention. With all the close attention to the different translations in the Lucretius podcast, I do find myself wondering about the original Latin wording from time to time.

I have been a BIG fan of the Perseus project for years! They also have online editions of Diogenes Laertius, Cicero, and many more. Check out the Collections link at the top of the page.

I'll be interested to read your take on the Latin if you decide to delve into that from time to time.
