

"Nihilist and Christian - They Rhyme In German...." From Nietzsche's Antichrist Reference to Epicurus

Post by "Martin" of July 30, 2021 at 10:54 AM

I will pronounce them during our Sunday call.

In German, -ist is a a very common ending for a person who belongs to a particlar group or has a particular characteristic, similar to scientist, physicist, chemist and so on in English, whereby, however, the German words for those have the in German more common ending -er for members of a profession.

Nietzsche's rhyme is there but it is nothing deeper than just a pun.