Hi, all!

Cassius: Although the reliability of Wikipedia is not rock-solid, this is a helpful list of Lucretius translations:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List\_of\_E...De\_rerum\_natura

My sense is that Cyril Bailey's translation is the most literal, but I'm especially fond of Leonard's. He seems to really "get" Lucretius.

If you're wondering about any particular passages in DRN, I'd be very happy to take a crack at them: just send them my way!

Finally - alas, my username is not Greek at all; it's just the first initial of my first name and my last name. Not too exciting, I fear.

Hiram: I look forward to reading your work!

Elli: I only teach ancient Greek. I'm afraid I don't know modern Greek, though the alphabet is the same!

Cheers, everyone, and thanks for your welcoming words!
