

A Comparison Chart on "The Goal"

Post by "Cassius" of May 29, 2016 at 5:37 PM

On a regular basis I like to drop back and summarize what I understand to be some of the key differences between Epicurean and other philosophies. This weekend I put together the following brief chart. There should be nothing on it new or different from things I have discussed on my blog before, but this format might be helpful for discussion and fine-tuning some of the terminology. As usual, there will be those who dispute my characterization of Stoic philosophy. Some of those challenges may be more or less valid - if you have a challenge to any of my formulations, please comment in the Epicurean Philosophy Facebook Group. If you do, it would be helpful if you would cite a reference to a recognized Stoic authority to show why you believe my summary is not accurate.

Everything here is a summary or paraphrase so no doubt much of it could be improved. If the chart serves as food for productive thought on these topics, then it has achieved its goal.

Click to view full size:

