

Episode One Hundred - Concluding On Justice With A Shout To Keep The Virtues In Their Proper Place

Post by "Cassius" of December 15, 2021 at 8:28 PM

I am in the editing stage of Episode 100 so the casters and I get the liberty of preparing the thread with clips we mentioned in the episode.

Here's one which will illustrate the Prosecutor who seeks justice to the ultimate degree - and who explaining it shows the seductive glory of virtue and justice all in one. It's a very memorable and attractive song -- shall we label this Epicurean due to the pleasure that comes from its beauty and because Epicurus seems to consider justice a virtue and virtue to go hand in hand with the pleasant life? 😊

Possibly it's also an illustration that if you don't know the background facts - who he is prosecuting and why - a message like this comes across as very sympathetically delivered. And maybe that makes it a great illustration of the key issue of justice -- that there "is no absolute justice" no matter how emotionally we plead for it.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=urxk4mveLCw>