

"Religion is a part of me"... how to deal with that?

Matt - agree on that, and that's probably a big lesson I'll take with me. Somehow sad, but again- in some thread I raised the issue of courage, and here it comes again. My friend even admitted that he's scared of the real world and needs God and the prospect of eternal life in order to fight through this whole mess. Sad, because he could have great pleasures in our current lives, but it's his choice. Maybe he'll come to the realization that he doesn't need a God in order to be happy. I honestly hope so.

(and that sounds a bit like the Christian argument: "I hope that he'll find to God one day", but in contrast to that, I don't believe in invisible sky men and thus consider my point of view empirically provable, and thus with a higher probability true!)

Kalosyni - yep, agree on that! And thanks for sharing - probably I'll listen to the podcast, because it seems very interesting. Will probably update this thread when I'll have done that.
