

Historical References on the School of Epicurean Philosophy - Notable Epicureans From The Ancient World To Today

Post by "Cassius" of February 1, 2022 at 11:44 AM

That's someone definitely to consider. She's certainly writing a lot of books and articles. But I wonder to what extent she says she agrees with it herself? (And of course that leads to the question of what kinds of caveats to include.) Same question would likely apply to Sedley, Tsouna, and probably several others. Are they academics and/or commentators or actual "promoters" of Epicurean philosophy, and what are their caveats?