

An Epicurean Understanding of Valentine's Day: Love, Romance, and Free-will

Post by “Kalosyni” of February 7, 2022 at 12:06 PM

As an Epicurean, here is what NOT to do:

Quote

In a little German town called Eutin, people still fall in love the old-fashioned way, through hand-written letters and destiny. Meet the celebrity oak tree that has been bringing together dreamers from around the world long before dating apps were even conceived.

<https://theculturetrip.com/europe/germany...ngles-together/>

This may lead to marriage but may not lead to long-term compatibility...and would say that this would be very Anti-Epicurean, since it relies on "fate"...but if you don't properly do a "hedonic calculus" regarding compatibility, then it will lead to unhappiness later after the romance "wears off".

I have read that one of the most common ways that couples meet is through friends and family, and that would also help screen out incompatible people immediately.