Thank you Cassius, and I totally see what you mean about leading with the positive.

Quote from Cassius

Epicurus taught that there are no absolute and artificial rules to which everyone must conform, but that we should live our lives by the standards that Nature herself teaches us through the senses and our feelings of pain and pleasure.

I think that would need its very own zine to explain, as would some of the other points in your post 8, as well.

As far as my post 6 above, maybe simply focusing on pleasure and the supporting text.

I can also imagine simple categories of basics presented with specific Principle Doctrines referenced.

Also thinking to explain the specific and pragmatic "what" and "why".
