

A Challenge To Epicurean Thinking Grounded in Epistemology and Physics

Post by “Eikadistes” of March 15, 2022 at 4:35 PM

Quote from EricR

Answer: Reality is comprised of whatever causes parts to combine to make wholes.

@EricR I just want to acknowledge that the reason I've been asking this specific line of questions is to demonstrate that all of your questions seem to demand Stoic and Skeptic answers. For example, you just stated, if I understand you correctly, that reality is not made of "things", but rather, "the reason things do the things they do." You just perfectly described Heraclitus' logos and the eternal fire of the Stoics, being the active principle that animates inert matter.

With respect, I am proposing that these questions are incoherent. We're chasing ghosts.