

Bookcase project

Yes even though there are numbers of "grey market sites" where they can be downloaded, it's not a good idea to post here and be trading PDFs of modern works that we know to be in copyright, for which distribution would appear to be in violation of applicable laws.

In addition to books another difficult area is that of PDFs imprinted and downloaded from JSTOR, of which the status is not particularly clear but which seems likely to be controversial.

I think Martin's main idea here is that of person-to-person forwarding of hard-copy books as in the example in the photos.

Being one myself, I wonder if this is likely to appeal only to "Boomers," but that doesn't mean we should not do it. "We" (superannuated as "we" are) are probably the only ones who still have hard-copy libraries, and as we "age out" (when the play ceases to please us 😊) do we really want our books to end up at the local Thrift store when we are gone? Nope.

Death may be nothing to us but we need to make provisions for our Epicurean books!
