

The Anti-Social Contract, an elaboration and advice on living unknown for introverted Epicureans

Post by “Joshua” of December 1, 2022 at 4:22 PM

Very good! One of the many reasons I still say that Thoreau is my favorite author, when asked, is because I find in him not an ascetic loneliness, but a solitude of a high aesthetic and intellectual polish. Loneliness is not thrown in greater relief by being alone, but by being in company and feeling yourself apart from it.