Thank you for the reply. That gets you a warm welcome - at least for the time being - even if you are a committed Stoic! 😊 Let us know if we can be of help in your reading.

Thanks to Joshua for pointing out to me that my "joke" probably was more confusing than anything else, despite the smiley face .

So to clarify, "no, i do not know that Warjuning is a Stoic, or anything else about him or her. " I was just making a general joke to the effect that even people who in the past consider themselves to be Stoic but who approach Epicurus with an open mind are welcome to participate with us in the forum here under the ground rules of our posting policy. I know we have lots of visitors here from different cultures for whom joking can be easily misunderstood, so I will try to be more careful about that, and I appreciate people calling things to our attention anytime something can be misinterpreted.
