

Knowledge of the Gods as "Manifest"

Quote from Cassius

it doesn't seem to entirely jibe with the references about receiving "images" of the gods

We receive images of the gods *in our minds.*

Per LSJ, in Ancient Greek, ἐναργής meant:

A. visible, palpable, in bodily shape, esp. of the gods appearing in their own forms, [Don's note: i.e., as in Homer when they appears as majestic, giant humanoids in person or in dreams or visions] or

2. manifest to the mind's eye

I cannot interpret any of Epicurus's words as meaning we see the gods with our physical eyes.
