Plus, I continue to advocate for a translation of "well-being" for eudaimonia. "Flourishing" doesn't strike me as conveying the right tone... it's hard to explain, but I'm sticking with "well-being."

It is really hard to explain, but I agree--flourishing is just not the right word! It sounds too Aristotelian, too much like 'these plants flourish in afternoon sun,' but with humans rather than plants.
