"No, I am too firm in my consciousness of the marvellous to be ever fascinated by the mere supernatural, which (take it any way you like) is but a manufactured article, the fabrication of minds insensitive to the intimate delicacies of our relation to the dead and to the living, in their countless multitudes; a desecration of our tenderest memories; an outrage on our dignity."

Wow! Thanks for sharing that. (Joshua, the depth of your erudition never ceases to amaze me -- especially in literature and poetry, but not limited there.)
