Subscribe to science pages. One cannot enjoy pure pleasure without the Study of Nature.

Avoid. Politics.

Focus on engaging people who share similar goals; in our case, groups that encourage the mutual study of Epicurus' teachings (Epicurean Philosophy, Society of Epicurus, Epicurean Memes For Hedonistic Beings, etc.)

Avoid. Politics.

Coordinate physical meetings. Social Media is integral to social organizing in the 21st-century (if we want to).

Avoid. Politics.

Correct ignorant people who don't vote for the right candidate ... no, just kidding.

Avoid. Politics.

Support each other's study. There is something to be said for serving our friends and protecting our interests, and providing friends with study tools and educational resources. (Share books!)

I think I made my point about politics. While we're at it, avoid getting into arguments with monotheists.

That also goes for Stoics, too. If you prioritize discussions with Christians and Stoics...
