

Welcome Rivelle!

Post by "Rivelle" of April 7, 2019 at 5:40 AM

Thank you for these replies.

"The True and the Good" has become a rather ingrained phrase (or what amounts to a singular concept) for my way of thinking for sometime now. As you all have pointed out this is indeed most likely Platonic. Or Christian (though I am not religious).

Most specifically, I think I took it from having read a lot of Hegel. "The True and the Good" might be seen as very rough approximation of Hegel's Absolute. Slavoj Zizek's version of Hegel's Absolute is a notably heterodox one. however.

I will certainly reflect further upon your replies and read further in Epicurus's thought and that of his followers. Maybe it's just the (revolutionary?) tonic that I need! 😊