

February 5, 2024 - First Monday Epicurean Philosophy Discussion

Post by "Bryan" of February 6, 2024 at 9:09 PM

(Philodemus - On the Stable Conduct of the Gods - Book 3, P.Herc. 157 fr. 76) "...but the conviviality can reach such a level that one might drink excessively, babble incoherently, dance without shame, and engage in other such unrefined activities. As for the nature of love (ἔρωϑ), it's not even right to speak of it as a virtue, given that the act of falling in love is found to be extremely harmful and chaotic. Love, after all, borders on madness."