Gods Do Not Protect Their Temples - I think this time line has been posted before, but today is probably a good day to repost it. Epicurean philosophy has pointed out for 2000 years the lesson of this timeline, that neither the ancient gods, nor the modern ones, protect their temples. And that is because of the observation made in PD1:

"1. A blessed and indestructible being has no trouble himself and brings no trouble upon any other being; so he is free from anger and partiality, for all such things imply weakness."

And in the letter to Menoeceus:

"For there are gods, and the knowledge of them is manifest; but they are not such as the multitude believe, seeing that men do not steadfastly maintain the notions they form respecting them. Not the man who denies the gods worshipped by the multitude, but he who affirms of the gods what the multitude believes about them is truly impious. For the utterances of the multitude about the gods are not true preconceptions but false assumptions; hence it is that the greatest evils happen to the wicked and the greatest blessings happen to the good from the hand of the gods, seeing that they are always favorable to their own good qualities and take pleasure in men like themselves, but reject as alien whatever is not of their kind."
