

Wurzburg Center for Epicurean Studies

The "original" was probably that re-assigned Italian site.

That each translation of a fragment by an Italian researcher seems to be revised by a member of the Wurzburg center indicates that the cooperation between the teams is fairly close and that the Wurzburg page is a good mirror site of whatever original might exist on an intranet in Italy.

South Germany is not on my itinerary this year, so it is unlikely that I will get some first-hand info soon. If I find some interesting material from Wurzburg in German, I will certainly elaborate here or on FB. Moreover, I prefer to acquire more formal knowledge on Epicurus' philosophy before making direct contact with the Wurzburg center.
