

Welcome Remus!

Salve, Cassius!

Thank you for the introduction. I first took an interest in Epicurus and his philosophy about a year ago. His teachings came across as shockingly contemporary and i was hooked. I first read Inwood's Reader, and Diogenes Laertius' chapter on Epicurus, then read De Rerum Natura, and then read De Witt's book to try to get some perspective and digest it all.

I've been listening to the podcasts, off and on, for months, and also sniffing (lurking?) around the forum from time to time but only joined today. I feel like I'm just at the beginning. I don't have many answers, but I believe I'm now at the point that I can start asking the right questions.
