

Classification Theory

Post by “Cassius” of June 17, 2024 at 7:17 AM

This post is primarily for Don but I think we have more than one participant who works in Don's field (maybe now including HollyGraves?) and I came across a website today advocating a method that might at some point be useful to consider some version of implementation for this site.

The website i came across is <https://johnnydecimal.com/> I see he has a video here: <https://johnnydecimal.com/10-19-concepts...cimal-workshop/>

First of all, I am wondering if Don or others use any kind of similar system in their personal or work life.

i ask this in part because it's a challenge to categorize forums and concepts so that they are findable. I think it definitely makes sense to use the "Physics, Canonics, Ethics" categories, but I'm wondering if it would be useful to impose some more formal structure on the subdivisions within those. Does anyone attempt to categorize their notes into anything resembling a "JohnnyDecimal-like" system?

Any thoughts appreciated.