

Why Does Stoicism Seem to Be More Popular Than Epicureanism, Especially In England?

Post by “michelepinto” of May 15, 2019 at 2:48 AM

Quote from Mousikos

A hedonistic pursuit of the good life does not strongly invite people who are interested in philosophy. And pleasure seekers may not be all that interested in philosophy.

This is a fault of philosophy itself, because people that want to be happy do not seek happiness in philosophy. And People want to be happy!