

Episode One Hundred Twenty-Three: Letter to Herodotus 12 - Events and Time

I'm going to have to reread this to get the most out of it, but I want to state already:

- I am very appreciative of your going through old episodes and adding commentary like this! We're doing a better job nowadays in discussing the episodes in real time, but there are a lot of old episodes with great material but little commentary, and this helps a lot.
- This post immediately strikes me as similar to your excellent and recent archery post pointing out how the archery researcher went back and looked at very old historical records and reinterpreted them to find out things that most were missing (and how much information had been lost). Developing analogies like this is a great way of understanding the topic and prompting others to think about the parallels and take them even further.
