Hello Fellow Iconoclastic Thinkers (the name of our monthly philosophy group established about a year ago). Feeling a deep hole in my heart for lack of a proper education in philosophy (I graduated from the University of California WITHOUT taking a philosophy course), I established our little philosophy group to help me and others fill the need for a truly comprehensive understanding of the world. I learned of Epicurus only recently after one of our sessions. I am especially impressed how Epicurus fills the voids left by the Stoics. I'm looking forward to the adventure here.

Edit: I just ordered a hardback copy of Dewitt's “Epicurus and His Philosophy” from Abe Books, the online used book store. Excited to read it as I have several other books I'm currently reading on Epicurus. I found this forum during a web search.
